Trade show goes well according to organizers

Weekend weather helped bring out a lot of people for the 29th edition of the Didsbury Art, Travel and Trade Expo on April 5 and 6 at the Didsbury Memorial Complex.

Although final numweren't known late Sunday afternoon, both days featured brisk attendance from people checking out more than 120 exhibitors, musical entertainment and the art on display at the jur-ied art show that was part of the event.

Vendors from Edmonton to Calgary, B.C. and Saskatchewan were at the expo displaying their products and advertising their services

"We had booths of all sorts. We had the jewelry and the clothing, had construction (companies), banks. That's why it's such a great show because there's something for everybody. We're getting to be known all over the place," said Deana Campbell, coordinator of the show

One of the returning vendors from Calgary, Juice Plus Tower Garden, made its 10th visit to the expo. The business focuses whole food capsules and chewables. It also has a hydroponic product people can purchase for year-round growing. Gerda Adderhold, who has owned the home-based business for 20 years, said she enjoys coming to the expo to expand her customer base and finds the community is welcoming.

"I have good results (from the expo). It's a good group of people," she said, adding that many who stop by her booth are intrigued by the possibility of yearround growing.

Campbell said imme-diately after the expo concludes, people are able to reserve a booth for next year's show. Since it will be the 30th anniversary next year, Campbell said planning will immediately start to make the expo better than this year's event.

"The vendors like that too, so that they already have that set up for next year. We usually get about 30 to 40 people that do that on a regular basis," she said, adding that registering early makes it easier on committee members organizing the event.

Horizon School observes its first World Autism Awareness Day

BY JOSEPH HO MVP Staff

Students and staff donned blue and sold crafts to observe World Autism Awareness Day at Olds' Horizon School on April 2.

This is the first year the school, which serves students with special needs, has marked the occasion.

"We're trying to set a tradition at this school so that our community is aware it is something to celsaid Debbie Haugen, an administrative support worker at the school. "The very uniqueness of our students is what we celebrate."

Students at the school sold crafts and baked goods with proceeds going toward the school's new playground fund.

"Every child is contributing with their own ability. Whatever they can contribute, that's what they're doing," Haugen said.

The United Nations first declared April 2 as World Autism Awareness Day in 2007, aiming to build awareness of the cognitive disorder, which affects brain development, social interaction, verbal and non-verbal communication. The Canadian government first recognized the day in 2012.

April is also considered Autism Awareness Month.
"I think as we educate in the community, I think that will be beneficial to our kids so that there's an acceptance," Haugen said. "I think globally, we're looking to that acceptance, that these kids are wonderful, they have so much to give so it's just a good way to start."

According to Haugen, most of the 35 students at the Horizon School have autism.

She also said that autism is on the rise, with rates increasing by 233 per cent since the 1970s, affecting four boys for every girl.

UNIQUE ART - Bill Anthony demonstrates his craft at "A Brush with Art" Show & Sale. Anthony uses recycled computer parts to make artistic pieces and also creates traditional stained glass work, sometimes combining the two forms together in the same piece.

Anthony creating unique art pieces

BY PAUL FREY MVP Staff

Local artist Anthony is applying his artistic talents in a unique way to create art out of recycled computer parts.

The Didsbury artist was among 14 artists from around Mountain View County and as far away as Vegreville who displayed their work at the Art, Travel and Trade Expo at the Didsbury Memorial Complex on April 5 and 6. The art show was a juried exhibit put on by the Mountain View Arts Society

Anthony, who has a studio on 20 Street, said after a trip to Manhattan to visit his uncle, he serendipitously stum-bled upon the new art form while he was flying across the burrough. Before the trip, he was making traditional stained glass art.

"I was flying out of New York over Manhattan, looked down and it looked like a computer board. It was so geo-metrically sectioned off like a computer board is, and the roads go straight forever, like the lines on computer boards, so I (wondered) if I could use computer boards (to create art)," he said. After some "dumpster diving" to find components, Anthony said he ran into the problem of how to cut the components down to useable pieces for art.

He said because the components are made of several different materials and thicknesses, he couldn't find the proper tool to cut them into functional pieces to use in his art. He wrecked many conventional tools trying to cut the pieces into something he could

"I tried a different tool and a different motor and a different this and a different that, until finally I made my own cutting device. So now I can cut the boards, I can shape them, I can do anything I want with them. And now the only thing that is slowing me down is my slow imagination. As fast as my imagination goes, that's the way I go," he said.

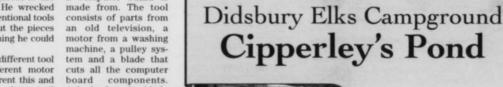

After three years trial and error, After Anthony made a cut ting tool that works on all the materials a computer board is made from. The tool consists of parts from an old television, components Asked what the blade wouldn't divulge that detail, because other artists might try to copy it.

While Anthony was developing the tool, he kept working on traditional stained glass, but admitted he did get frus-trated with the amount of time it took until he developed the cutting

Cyberbullying solutions need to be community-wide

In an effort to curtail the rise of cyberbullying in Canada over the past decade, the federal government has introduced new legislation that is expected to pass into law this spring.

Under changes to the Criminal Code of Canada, a specific prohibition on the transmission of intimate images without the subject's permission will be put in place.

Including other new provisions, such as allowing courts to seize electronic devices used to commit cyberbullying, the new law is an important step being applauded by many stakeholders.

For example, in its recent monthly Journal editorial, the Canadian Medical Association (CMA) said toughening up the law is an important step that deserves to have the backing of physicians and other health-care professionals.

"Modernizing our laws to incorporate cyberbullying explicitly is a positive step to improve health and one that the medical profession should suprout "the CMA said."

port," the CMA said.
"This welcome new legislation will complement provincial initiatives to improve the ability of law enforcement to address the most serious forms of cyberbullying."

Cyberbullying can involve taunting, teasing, harassing and belittling victims of all ages. Sadly, as some of the top users of Facebook, Twitter and other social media, young people are also most likely to be victimized.

Educators and health professionals have long said that bullying of any kind, including cyberbullying, can have very serious negative impacts on victims.

Cyberbullying has, for example, been linked to depression and alcohol and drug abuse, problems that, unfortunately, can sometimes carry on into adulthood

"Cyberbullying is also associated with an increased risk of suicide, perhaps more so for girls," the CMA said.

As well as applauding the new legislative efforts now before Parliament, the CMA says schools must also continue to lead the fight against cyberbullying through "education, prevention, monitoring and enforcement."

And of course parents also have a role in making sure their children reject cyberbullying – teaching children that bullying in all forms is wrong and unwanted is every parent's and caregiver's responsibility and obligation.

The society-wide prevalence of personal computers, smartphones and other electronic devices probably now makes the outright elimination of cyberbulying an impossibility robably now makes the outright elimination of cyberbullying an impossibility.

Yet as the CMA rightly points out, a community-wide effort involving young people, parents, teachers and health-care professionals can and will go a long way in helping limit cyberbullying in the months and years to come.

Hopefully this new anti cyberbullying legislation now before Parliament will pass into law without undue delay, helping better protect young people in every Canadian community in the process.

Letter to the editor

Curling club AGM upcoming

Dear Didsbury residents,

Thank you for all the support you have given the curling club over the past couple of months. We really appreciate all the editorials and letters you have written and questions you have asked about our situation. We are currently working with the town to see how we can ensure that the curling club doors stay open well into the future.

Although the curling club believes that the rent/utilities are too high, and that a reduction in these expenses is essential to the survival of the club, we do not believe that this reduction is the entire solution. We also need to grow our membership, do more fundraising and try to draw more interest with new social events such as a family league and glow-curling – all of which are in the works.

We would like to focus on growing our juniors program because they are the future of the club. We had a very successful junior/adult bonspiel last month and we hope to make that an annual event. We are also hoping to come up with evening weekend events for teens.

These initiatives, however, need the support of Didsbury residents to succeed. If the residents of Didsbury get behind us, we will not only survive, but thrive.

If you've never curled, but want to give it a try, talk to us. If your kids think curling looks like fun, talk to us. If you used to curl, and want to get back into it, talk to us. If you're new to town, and looking for ways to meet people, talk to us. If you want curling to be available in town now and in the future, talk to us. If you want to rent some ice for a gettogether, talk to us. If you want to expand your advertising, talk to us. If you want to us. If you want to us. If you want to watch some curling and have a drink, talk to us. If you want to offer a donation, talk to us.

We hope you will see the curling club as an open public space.
Think of us like a bowling alley.
You can rent our "lanes" any time you want as long as leagues aren't playing. If you don't have a broom or a slider, you can use ours free of charge. Just give us a call and book yourself in.

We will be hosting a cabaret at the Multi-Purpose Room on May 10 after the show and shine in the hopes of raising money to pay for some of our expenses next year. If it is successful, we hope to make this an annual event. You can purchase tickets by emailing or calling me (my contact information is below).

Our annual general meet-

Our annual general meeting (AGM) is on April 8 and we would love to see a large crowd. We will be discussing our meetings with the town, suggestions for growth, new leagues and bonspiels, and voting on a new board. New faces and new ideas are not only appreciated, they are very needed and welcome.

needed and welcome. We only have the finances to keep the curling club running for one more curling season if things don't change. We will do our part to save the club or go down fighting. And we hope that you see the importance of the curling rink and want to help. Curling is not for everyone, but it's important to many. It would be a shame to let down a lot of seniors who rely on curling for socializing and exercise and a lot of juniors who are just learning the fun of the game not to mention all the other people who curl in our leagues and bonspiels. It would also be a shame to let such a beautiful facility become another vacant building in town.

If you have any questions or ideas about how you could help the Didsbury Curling Club, please email me at jabommarito@hotmail.com, phone me at 403-335-3753 or come to our annual general meeting on April 8 at 7 p.m. in the curling club lounge.

Saying thank you is a powerful way to recognize volunteers

STEVE TIPMAN

Every time I hear Winston Churchill's famous quote: "We make a living by what we do, but we make a life by what we give," I think about how fortunate we are as Canadians to have so many volunteers giving their time -to improve our communities, and quality of life.

National Volunteer Week is a time to celebrate and acknowledge volunteers for their efforts and contributions. This is the 11th year that Investors Group has partnered with Volunteer Canada to deliver this important campaign. Thanks to their generous support and leadership, we have been able to encourage and further volunteer recognition across the country.

National Volunteer Week is significant. It would be difficult to find someone whose life has not been touched by one of Canada's 13.3 million volunteers. I myself will never forget an inspiring volunteer coach I had growing up as a minor hockey league player. Not only did he teach me the fundamentals of the game itself, he also taught everyone the importance of teamwork and perseverance – qualities that remain with me to this day.

Saying thank you is a powerful way to recognize volunteers. A recent study conducted for Volunteer Canada indicates that volunteers prefer to simply be thanked and wish to hear about how their work has impacted others - instead of more formal acknowledgments.

Volunteer work speaks volumes. In some cases, one generous act can have a huge effect on an entire community—like one volunteer did in Ottawa, who planted a garden to grow organic food for the local homeless shelter. In other instances an entire team of volunteers can collectively change the course of one life—like a rural volunteer fire department that rescues a person from a dangerous situation.

During National Volunteer Week, as well as year round, Volunteer Canada and Investors Group urge Canadians to thank a volunteer for their efforts, and for helping to make Canada healthy and vibrant.

Steve Tipman is the president and CEO of Volunteer Canada.

Top 10 ways to show volunteers appreciation

Top 10 best practices in volunteer recognition from Volunteer Canada and Envision.ca:

1. Say "thank you!"

2. Make it a priority

Recognize volunteers to retain them and to attract new ones. Designate someone in your organization to be responsible for volunteer recognition.

3. Do it often

Recognition of volunteers should happen on a year-round, frequent and informal basis.

4. Do it in different ways

Vary your recognition efforts. Here are some examples:

- Invite a speaker to talk about how he or she has been affected by your volunteers.
- Treat your volunteers to a performance by a stand-up comic, musician or an improvisational theatre group.
- Say thanks by creating a slide show featuring photos from the past year of your volunteers in action.
- Announce important milestones, including the number of volunteer hours, lives touched and goals met.

5. Be sincere

Make each occasion an opportunity to reflect on the value volunteers bring to your organization.

Recognize the person (not the work)

Emphasize the contribution of the individual and say: "You did a great job!" instead of "This is a great job!"

7. Make it appropriate to the achievement

A certificate may be appropriate for a few months of service. An engraved plaque may better suit 10 years of volunteerism.

8. Be consistent

Make sure the standards of recognition you establish can be maintained by your organization in years to come.

9. Be timely

Recognize volunteers soon after an achievement has been reached. Delaying diminishes the value of your gratitude.

10. Customize it

Get to know your volunteers and their unique interests so that you can learn how best to recognize each individual and make them feel special.

Assault charges pending

Assault charges are pending against a 58-yearold Didsbury man after he got into an alterca-tion with a 55-year-old Didsbury man at a local bar on March 29. RCMP and emergency medical service per-sonnel were called to the business at about 2 a.m. after receiving a report about two men getting into an alter-cation. Police say the assailant broke a beer bottle over the victim's head, causing injury to the victim's left temple, a gash to his cheek and "substantial" gash to his chest as a result of the broken glass.

The perpetrator received a cut to his hand as a result of the broken glass. Both men went to the Didsbury hospital to get treatment of their injuries. The perpetrator has a June 16 date to answer the charges.

minor injuries at the scene of a single-vehicle rollover east of the Didsbury overpass at the correction line at Highway 582 and Rge. Rd. 270.3. The crash happened on March 31 at about 10:30 a.m.

RCMP say the man, driving a three-ton commercial truck, was eastbound on Highway 582 and due to dense fog at the time of the crash, did not see the intersection with Rge. Rd. 270.3. As a result, the man drove through the intersection and rolled into the east ditch. RCMP did not charge the man with any provincial traffic

Man flees home after being confronted

RCMP received a report of a man stealing jewelry from a home on 21 Avenue and 21 Street between 3:30 and 4:30 p.m. on March 28. The man fled the home in the midst of rummaging through jewelry when he was confronted by the homeowner.

Woman charged with impaired

A 66-year-old Carstairs woman is facing charges of impaired driving and failing to provide a breath sample after Didsbury RCMP responded to a driving complaint on March 31 at 1 p.m. RCMP located a grey Chrysler 300 north of the Carstairs golf course The woman has a May court date.

Police seeking found money

Police are appealing to the person that found a substantial amount of cash to turn it in to the detachment after a person reported losing $700 in dif-ferent-denomination bills on April 1

According to police, a person came forward and told them that the money was in a white envelope and they lost it while in downtown Didsbury sometime between 2 and 4 p.m.

Invoicing scam making rounds

Didsbury RCMP are warning business people to be on the lookout for an invoicing scam that attempts to lure unsus pecting businesses.

According to police, a mock company from Quebec is requesting payment for a "final invoice for a supposed advertis-ing bill dating back to November 2013.

Police say the scam preys particularly on highbusinesses in which those in charge of accounts can't remember all the outstanding invoices that are due. Police say accounting personnel that stay current with all their invoicing should have no trouble in spotting the scam if they are approached

Didsbury skaters end season on high note

BY PAUL FREY MVP Staff

Skaters from the Didsbury Figure Skating Club (DFSC) ended the season on a posi tive note, gaining 16 medals from a competition at the Olds Sports Complex from March 28 to 30.

Erin Black earned a gold and silver, while Alexa Bricker ad Bailey Weber each and Bailey Weber each earned a silver and a bronze. Hannah Dodd, Carly Dunn, Kaira Hall and Sydney Weber each earned a silver while Sydney Snyder and Kolby Thompson each earned a gold and a bronze for their efforts. Amanda Trottier earned two at the event, 600 skaters from 58 different clubs throughout Alberta, B.C. and the Northwest Territories attended.

"I think the girls did really well considering some of the competition that was there. There were clubs there that way more ice time. worked really hard," They said Llonda Leaver, one of the club's coaches, noting that some clubs skate about 25 hours per week compared to DFSC members who skate about five hours per week. "It year. Everybody had a lot of fun." was a great way to end the said DFSC skaters Leaver will typically attend one other large event per year such as the one in Olds, although it was larger than the other events, that might have about 400 skaters attending.

Because figure skating is such an individual sport, events such as the one in Olds are good team-building exer-

"This gives them an opportunity to really bond, first of all with the skaters that they regularly practise with from our own club and they cheer each other on, so that's a great team-building event and they get to go out and see what other clubs are doing ... on routines," she said.

Didsbury skaters won one gold and two silvers in team events.

Leaver estimated there could be about five new skaters joining the competitive level of skating from the lower levels of CanSkate for next season, giving the club roughly 25 competitive skaters

"It's a pretty high number in this level of skating in a town of this size," she said.

Is Everyone Ready for Spring?

As the spring thaw quickly approaches, we would like to provide residents a few suggestions to help minimize the risk of flooding to your home or business.

LOT DRAINAGE

You can be proactive and make sure snow and ice do not accumulate along the edges of your building causing flooding in basements.

- Shovel piled snow well away from the foundation of buildings.
- ✓ Check eaves troughs and downspouts to make sure drainage is flowing to the front and rear of your property and NOT onto your neighbors property.

The Town of Didsbury Land Use Bylaw 2013-03 (Part 3 Section 9.0 Storm Drainage) states:

"1. All roof drainage from any building(s) shall be directed onto the parcel upon which such building(s) are situated by means of eaves troughs and downspouts, or other suitable means.

2. All properties shall adhere to the approved storm water management plan for their area."

✓ Splash pads under your downspouts will assist in directing water away from the foundation of your building or home.

SUMP PUMPS

Keep your eye on rain and melting snow. A finished basement is a significant investment in the value of your home and a flooded basement can be very expensive and time-consuming to repair. Sump pumps are used to keep basement dampness under control if the local water table is above the foundation of a home. They are relatively inexpensive and will make sure that water levels are no longer problematic by sending the water away from your building foundation.

To become more informed about what you can do to prepare your homes and families against future flooding, please visit the Government of Alberta press release at: http://alberta.ca/release.cfm?xID=361142BEE47CE-DDA9-3F9F-225DEC780C5D52DB

'I tried all kinds of other tools and I kept failing and failing and so after almost three years I found the right combination. I ruined more tools and blades ... almost having stuff fly in my face, cut-ting my hands. I went through a lot of pain trying to find the right combination," he said.

As far as Anthony knows, he is the only art-ist possibly in North America making art out of recycled computer components.

His work has caught the attention of the Alberta Recycling Council, for whom he's made artistic pieces for the council to hand out as awards to people recognized for their recycling work.

He also will display his work for the ARC at Chinook Centre mall in Calgary on April 22 (Earth Day) to April 24. He's also done pieces for Sustainable Development Calgary. He's been working with recycled computer components for the past 17 years.

Anthony got started in art while still working as a teacher. He took an introductory stained glass course in Winnipeg where he was living at the time, and found he liked it so much that he quit his job as a teacher, became a full-time artist and moved to Didsbury.

"I just sit there (in the studio) and I play every day from 10 (a.m.) to 5 (p.m.) Monday to Friday and I have great fun doing it."

OHS student charged with sexual assault, forcible confinement

BY PAUL EVEREST MVP Staff

A 15-year-old Olds High School student is facing charges of sexual assault, forcible confinement and assault in connection to an alleged incident involving a 14-year-old student at the school.

Police said the alleged incident happened at the school in what is known as a "breakout" room on March 25.

The school's principal, Tom Christensen, reported the incident to police on March 28.

The male suspect, who cannot be named under the Youth Criminal Justice Act, is not in custody, police said. Kurt Sacher, super-intendent of schools for Chinook's Edge School Division, said the suspect and the female victim were "acquainted" and the alleged incident took place roughly one hour after the end of the school day on

He added Christensen reported the alleged incident to police as soon as he was made aware of the situation and superinten-dent staff at the school division were informed at about the same time.

Sacher said he did not know who reported the alleged incident to Christensen.

While Sacher said disciplinary matters involving students are dential," he told the Olds Albertan "the student will not be in school in the near future as this matter is looked into carefully."

The school and the school division are giving their "full cooperation" to the RCMP as they inves tigate the matter, he said, and the school division's senior staff were planning to meet on April 7 to discuss the incident.

"We do want to be abundantly clear that the safety of our students is our highest priority in Chinook's Edge," Sacher said.
